

Korea, the Parasites's Paradise Declared by Professors

Seoul, South Korea (5/22)- South Korea's 6000+ members college professors' association has just issued a dire warning to the country and appealed to the free world: Korea will become the parasites's paradise unless the Central Election Committee and the Moon Jae In regime rescind the recent rigged April 15 election which would give the absolute majority to the Moon's ruling democratic party.

Without the regime's election court intervention to overturn the rigged election, the foreseeable future election frauds will most certainly perpetuate the political and multicultural corruptions with impunity only seen in a totalitarian government, as evidenced by many recent examples such as the ultimate hypocrite Cho Kook who as the chief presidential advisor and a law school professor of the top ranking Seoul National University had evaded the system everywhere while preaching ethics, Yoon Mi Hyang who swindled the WW2 comfort women's charity funds and got elected in the recent rigged election as the Minju democratic ruling party candidate, and the multiple local election frauds manipulated by the regime, etc.

Despite the numerous indisputable evidences and thorough statistical thesis reports of world renown Professor Walter Mebane Jr of University of Michigan, strongly implicating fraudulent election manipulations during the congressional election held on April 15, most of the Korea's mainstream news media publications, except several conservative YouTube broadcasters, are silent on the rigged election for fear of retaliation and backfire from the powerful regime backed by the various labor unions, left wing political parties, and invisibly controlling hands of communist North Korea and the deep state dark influences of CCP.

The ruling party had declared that they would do whatever it takes to hold power for the next 100 years, and they have just proved the point during this election cycle, and one can almost bet they will prove success for the next presidential election in two years. The college professors association declared that these are choices made available for only those who are destined to win always with impunity in the elections no matter what crimes or corruptions they choose to commit with arrogance.

The professors say it is disgraceful and shameful and runs against their social values and conscience minds and souls to see so many high ranking elected congressional members and cabinet members leading such corruptive lives. They are, however, more concerned about the sad reality that these dark forces are so rampant and hidden deep in the regime very much like the parasites which were depicted as the underground circles living off the productive society, featured in the Oscar winning Hollywood movie, The Parasites. The leftwing socialistic elites are everywhere in all walks of life in the current S. Korean society, influencing and manipulating public opinions through mainstream media in the backdrop of political parties, securing all three branches of the government, labor unions, etc. invisibly manipulated by CCP and N. Korea. They share the same socialistic ideology and political power and engage in corruptive practices without feeling shame or guilt and with impunity at the expense of hard working taxpayers of the rest of the country. The professors association questions the identity of these groups with anxiety and insecurity for the future of the nation.

On May 22, they strongly urged the Moon's regime, the ruling Minju Democratic Party, and the Central Election Committee to investigate the massive fraudulent election claims filed already in the courts. Just 22 days earlier on April 30, they had demanded to honor and protect the individual citizen's right to vote based on a very fundamental human right.

The association doubts whether the perpetrators have ability to make judgements on wrong doings morally and then goes on stating that the underlying nature of the societal crisis originating from the attitudes portrayed by the ruling party is not that their governing leadership will be judged by the people in the democratic system but that they have the misplaced confidence of authoritative dictators that they can always overrule the will of the people. We hope that this misplaced confidence is unrelated to the strong and mounting allegation that the April 15 general election was heavily rigged and manipulated with help of illegal advanced computer systems. We declare that the responsibility to investigate the allegation of the rigged election lies solely on the Blue House, the presidential palace and the ruling Minju democratic party.

If the current regime continues to ignore these calls for the investigation and continues to defend the wrong doing with arrogance, and if the Central Election Committee's executive board members who were appointed by the Moon Jae In's regime persist on protecting them by doing nothing, we have no choice but to conclude that the regime's ability to judge is lost and that the stage is being set for the regime to try to forcefully impose twisting justice, distorting history, and misplacing sense of corruption persecution.

Professors emphatically said that since there have been numerous, mounting, and indisputable evidences for the 4.15 fraudulent elections including renown Professor Walter Mebane's statistical study report, strongly implicating fraudulent election manipulations, the Moon's regime should consider itself that it works for the benefit of the people and for the true justice and its future instead of selfish acts of taking care for themselves. The regime must really show that judgement process through the election system is just, fair, trustable, and transparent. They also added that the Central Election Council must come forward voluntarily to explain the allegation and assist to preserve and safeguard the vote evidence records instead of denying with unacceptable excuses and should rewrite to safeguard the election law.

The old saying, "the absolute authoritative power absolutely corrupts" is absolute truth. The democratic political system that checks on human instinct imposes term limits, judicial control systems, and regime change. The rigged election allegation addresses at its core the real risk that the most important judging element called the regime change may become extinct forever.

They ended by saying that should this rigged election proves to be valid, the country would become a paradise for the parasites. Hence, these allegations must be investigated thoroughly by the regime and the Central Election Council, National Assembly, and all citizen groups and punish the offending perpetrators accordingly and secure the election system to prevent it from ever recurring.
